Historic Rangeley announces leadership transition

RANGELEY - James Brown of Rangeley has been named the next Executive Director of the Rangeley Lakes Region Historical Society (also known as Historic Rangeley) which operates the Outdoor Heritage Museum in Oquossoc and the Rangeley History Museum in downtown Rangeley.

Brown had previously worked at Saddleback Maine as Development Finance Manager and M&H Logging as CFO. Brown succeeds Michelle Landry, who is stepping down in October after having led the organization since 2022.

Said Brown upon accepting the position. "I am honored to represent Historic Rangeley and am looking forward to expanding our exhibits and encouraging more people to come see our amazing artifacts and displays".

Landry plans to continue serving nonprofits through her freelance and consulting work. Of her departure, she stated: "I am forever grateful to have been Historic Rangeley's Executive Director for the last five seasons, and I'm so proud of how much the organization has advanced and evolved.

James Brown

I am thankful to the Board, the staff, and the entire Historic Rangeley community for the wonderful support and delightful camaraderie while we worked to build something truly special together. I leave Historic Rangeley knowing that it is in a strong position to welcome Jim Brown as its next leader. Jim not only brings his business and fundraising experience to Historic Rangeley, but also an unparalleled enthusiasm and dedication. I look forward to watching this organization continue to shine and flourish."

wHistoric Rangeley's mission is to preserve the region's history and engage the public through its museums, collections, programs, exhibits, and events. The Outdoor Heritage Museum is located at 8 Rumford Road in Oquossoc and the Rangeley History Museum is located at 2472 Main Street in Rangeley.

Museum hours vary seasonally. More information can be found at historicrangeley.org.

Deadline for 2027 Maine Women's Hall of Fame nominations is Nov. 1

AUGUSTA - Nov. 1 is the deadline for nominations for the 37th Maine Women's Hall of Fame in 2027.

The Maine Women's Hall of Fame inducts women — both contemporary and historical — who have made, or are making, significant statewide contributions, in fields such as the arts, education, public policy, the sciences and the humanities. Nominations are open to the public and focus on Maine women who are pioneers and leaders. Particular consideration will be given to those who have significantly impacted the lives of women. Nomination requirements and submission information are online at https://bpwmefoundation.org/maine-womens-hall-of-fame/nominations/

An induction ceremony in Augusta in the spring, typically held during Women's History Month in March, will honor the woman or women of achievement selected by an independent panel of judges.

Past inductees to the Maine Women's Hall of Fame include authors, athletes, artists, activists, administrators, political and religious leaders, educators, doctors, lawyers, scientists and college presidents. Among the most recent honorees: the late U.S. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Dr. Alane O'Connor, director of perinatal addiction medicine at MaineHealth Maine Medical Center. A full list of inductees, starting with Sen. Margaret Chase Smith and women's health advocate Mabel Wadsworth in 1990, is online at https://bpwmefoundation.org/maine-womens-hall-of-fame/nominations/.

Maine Business and Professional Women/Maine Futurama Foundation established the Maine Women's Hall of Fame. The Bennett D. Katz Library at the University of Maine at Augusta has a collection of photographs, video recordings and other materials from the Maine Women's Hall of Fame induction ceremonies, as well as a permanent public gallery of inductee portraits.

Maine BPW/Futurama Foundation, working with Maine Community Foundation, awards annual scholarships to outstanding and deserving Maine women to help them achieve economic self-sufficiency.

MOVIE REVIEW by Lucas Allen

Primetime

(A24)

Cable TV went through a different kind of zeitgeist with the reality TV boom of the 2000's. One of those popular shows is depicted in the new drama "Primetime," about that great chase for fame and fortune for some involved. The film's director is Lance Oppenheim, and the writer is Ajon Singh, who adapted it from an article titled "Tonight on Dateline, This Man Will Die" written by Luke Dittrich.

Working for Dateline NBC, journalist Chris Hansen (Robert Pattinson) and his producing partner Andie (Merritt Wever) create a series for the network called "To Catch a Predator," where they catch pedophiles in the act by setting them up with their supposed "victims" they met online, but played by young adult actors. As the show becomes an instant hit, a young actor named Dan (Skyler Gisondo) auditions to play the decoy, and he soon joins Andie with consulting activist Xavier (Matthew Maher) and another decoy actor named Del (Phoebe Bridgers). Though his first experience with a target (former child star Jonathan Lipnicki in a revealing cameo) was unexpected, Hansen encourages him to shine in his role.

Meanwhile, Hansen faces a moral crisis when his extramarital affair is spotted by the paparazzi just when his marriage to his wife Mary (Anna Faris) is already falling apart. Not to mention, doing the show has him vying for some bigger fish to catch for the sake of ratings since the show is playing opposite ABC's juggernaut "Lost." He soon finds what he is looking for when his team finds an online chat linked to a Texas district attorney (Alex Winter) and gets help from the local sheriff (Bokeem Woodbine) in a sting operation, but at what cost?

This is not the kind of movie that tries to tell its true story faithfully with only a few embellishments, but it instead tells its story differently without trying to bore the viewer. In fact, that is what makes it a fascinating film to watch when it is more about Hansen's detachment from reality chasing that goal he wanted. Not only that, but it also shows how that kind of self-imposed need to succeed can have a negative consequence on those around him.

The movie also focuses on Dan's unpredictable journey of his own. His struggle to understand the world he has dropped himself in is actually very relatable and well-written. Anyone who has ever landed a dream job or dealt with an increasingly difficult boss can identify with the young character.

Surprisingly, the whole story plays out like an arthouse psychological thriller with its dream-like atmosphere and suspense. A good majority of the film comes from Hansen's perspective as we watch his growing paranoia, and selfish behavior consumes him to the point his moral compass shifts away from him. Throughout this nearly two-hour film, we are witnessing the mental descent of an ambitious personality, but we are also seeing an interesting contrast between him and Dan as they each find their breaking point during the last act. Whether or not you would agree with the way it unfolds, it's still a brilliant exercise in ambition and insanity that only a dark Hollywood tale can be told.

Along with his supporting role in last summer's The Odyssey, Pattinson is certainly heading for Oscar glory, especially with his excellent portrayal of Hansen. His sense of urgency and maddening expressions in his facial language enhances his very layered performance. Extra attention also goes to Gisondo for giving us different sides of his character throughout his whole arc plus Wever for finding something deeper with her character's own morality. The smaller actors also deserve some notice for adding more to the story's depth between Woodbine's Texan humor and Winter's underlying moodiness.

While it's sure to divide audiences, Primetime explodes with such intensity about the consequences of fame and exploitation. Give it a chance, and maybe you'll find something out of it the next time you watch your favorite reality TV program.

November is Lung Cancer Awareness Month ~ National Lung Cancer Screening Day is November 14th

November is Lung Cancer Awareness Month in the United States. The primary goal is to raise awareness about lung cancer, its risk factors, symptoms, early detection, and treatment options. This annual month-long campaign aims to educate the public about the importance of lung health and encourages people to take proactive steps towards prevention and early diagnosis.

During National Lung Cancer Awareness Month, various organizations, healthcare providers, advocacy groups, and communities organize events such as informational sessions, fundraisers, walks, and screenings. These activities aim to empower individuals with knowledge about lung cancer, reduce stigma associated with the disease, and emphasize the importance of research and support for those affected by lung cancer.

Free ME from Lung Cancer is honored to partner with the following organizations to highlight lung cancer and lung cancer screening in Maine: The American Cancer Society, Maine Lung Cancer Coalition and all the hospitals listed below and bring special acknowledgement to Mount Desert Island Hospital. Although Mount Desert Island Hospital is a small community hospital, it's important to mention that they were the first American College of Radiology Imaging Center of Excellence in the nation.

According to the American Cancer Society 2026 Cancer Facts & Figures report, an estimated 229,410 new cases of lung cancer (110,920 in men and 118,500 in women) will be diagnosed in the US and 124,990 people will die from the disease (63,040 in men and 61,950 women) Lung cancer accounts for more than 1 in 5 cancer deaths each year. According to the American Cancer Society, the lifetime risk of developing lung cancer in the United States is about 1 in 19 (approximately 5.3%) for the general population, including both smokers and non-smokers. Yes, even those who don't smoke can get lung cancer.

The American Cancer Society 2026 Cancer Facts & Figures also reports that 1,460 people in Maine will be diagnosed with lung & bronchus cancers and 800 will die of the disease. Lung cancer remains the number one cause of death from cancer in Maine (and in the US). We can try to change those statistics by joining together to provide awareness and education and encouraging patients who are at high risk to talk with their doctors to see if they should be screened for lung cancer.

Saturday November 14th is National Lung Cancer Screening Day. This annual event aims to increase access to lung cancer screening, particularly for people who work during the week and may have difficulty accessing screening services during regular business hours. Many hospitals and other health care facilities in Maine offer lung cancer screening, with some offering screening evenings and/or weekends. We urge all patients who are at high risk for lung cancer (those between the ages of 50-80 who currently use tobacco or did within the past 15 years) to contact their primary care clinician to see if they qualify to be screened. Catching lung cancer early creates treatment opportunities to save lives and improve outcomes. Screening for lung cancer is a quick, easy and non-invasive procedure offered by many health care providers and is fully covered by most insurance companies including Medicare and MaineCare if you are eligible. Eligibility is based on how much a person used tobacco in their life time and how long it has been since they stopped using tobacco. Talk with your primary care provider about the risks and benefits of lung cancer screening. Early detection does save lives.

The Salmon Paradox

On the Kenai, with the help of a wonderful fishing guide, I caught and boated a 63 lb. King Salmon. Diane, my late wife, caught a 33-pounder, too.

In all my years of fishing, two fly fishing adventures stand out in my memory like no others: catching salmon that ran into rivers from the sea. These rivers were far removed from each other; one was the fabled Kenai River in Alaska and the other the equally fabled Upsalquitch River in New Brunswick.

For sport angling, it was a heady time. The 1990s, before the sea-run salmon were in a seeming struggle for survival.

On the Kenai, with the help of a wonderful fishing guide, I caught and boated a 63 lb. King Salmon. Diane, my late wife, caught a 33-pounder, too. During that same decade, I was fortunate enough to fish the Canadian Upsalquitch River where, again with the help of a guide, I beached an 18 lb. fresh run Atlantic Salmon.

Both angling experiences were, as the cliché goes, "about as good as it gets." Don't get me wrong. Fly fishing for Maine brookies on a remote trout pond during a Green Drake hatch is angling nirvana, yes, but a singing reel with a dancing Atlantic trying to shake of a Rusty Rat is an adrenaline rush of the first order!

Today, both the Atlantic salmon run in the Canadian Maritimes and the King salmon runs in Alaska are just not what they were back then. Biologically, they are in trouble. Alaska hasn't banned King salmon sport fishing statewide, but some of its most important King salmon rivers are now closed, and the Yukon River system is under an extraordinary rebuilding program extending at least through 2030.

On the New Brunswick Rivers, the salmon situation is a mixed bag. On the Miramichi River, which is arguably the most well-known, juvenile Atlantic salmon of all age classes in the four principal Miramichi watershed rivers have declined significantly over the past 12 years. That river is in trouble, and today the fishing is in stark contrast to what it was in the days when my Dad salmon fished with the famous Red Sox hitter Ted Williams and came home with salmon for the freezer and lots of snapshots for the family album.

Fishing wise, there is somewhat of a paradox on the New Brunswick Rivers. The fishing statistics can look pretty good while the salmon population is biologically in trouble. That's because catch-per-unit-effort in a handful of premium pools doesn't tell us how many salmon the entire river system can produce.

In chatting recently with a friend, who fishes the Restigouche River, the salmon angling this past June was, according to his report, "pretty darn good." One of his fish was a 25-pound fresh run Atlantic, which, of course, he promptly released. (Fishing there is strictly catch and release).

One stretch of the Restigouche produced an estimated 160 salmon from 94 rod-days, or 1.7 salmon per rod-day. Anglers recorded 127 grilse and 33 large salmon there.

Most experts agree that, however perplexing, the sea run salmon picture is a survival mystery that is grounded more on what is going on at sea rather than in the rivers themselves. Components of the sea- survival equation include warming waters, commercial harvest, predation and a host of other factors.

The author is editor of the Northwoods Sporting Journal. He is also a Maine Guide and writes a weekly outdoors column for a number of Maine newspapers.

Strengthening Maine Families, Communities, and Our Future

By U.S. Senator Susan Collins

Mainers work hard, and every dollar matters to seniors on limited incomes, parents trying to afford childcare, and young people wondering whether they can buy a home in the town where they grew up.

Making Maine more affordable guides my work in Washington. Since Congress restored community project funding five years ago, I have secured nearly $1.5 billion for 672 projects in communities in every county, As Chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, my seniority allows me to keep delivering for Maine.

Strengthening families starts with affordability and quality health care close to home. I continue to champion the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, so that no low-income senior or family has to choose between heat and groceries. I secured the $50 billion Rural Health Transformation Program, which has already delivered $190 million to Maine. Separately, I secured funding to modernize Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway and to renovate emergency departments in Rumford and Bridgton. A mobile mammography van that I helped to fund has already screened 1,400 women.

Strengthening communities means taking care of our infrastructure. I secured funding to rehabilitate Route 4 between Madrid and Rangeley and to improve its safety from Auburn to Livermore, along with investments in emergency services and drinking water systems.

Strengthening our future means giving the next generation a reason to stay. Funding I obtained for healthcare training at the University of Maine at Farmington and nursing education at Central Maine Community College, along with expanded broadband, is helping young Mainers find good jobs and build lives here.

My time in the Senate has taught me that lasting results require trust. I work with Republicans and Democrats, listen to people with different views, and look for common ground. We do not have to agree on everything to get important work done.

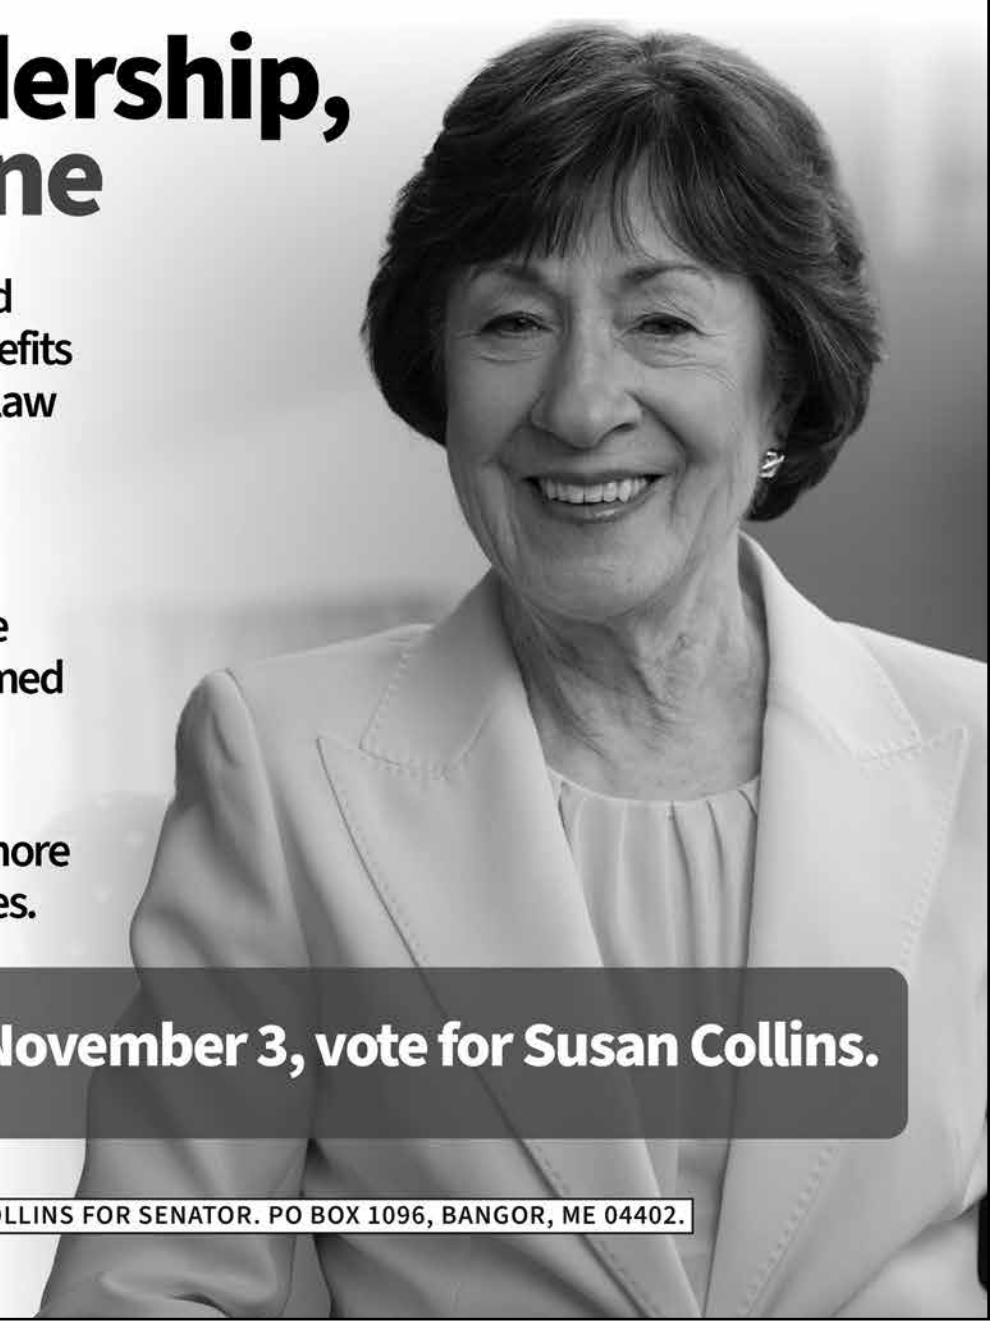

There is a difference between fighting for people and simply fighting with people.

Partisan political groups may disagree with my record, but Mainers deserve facts, not false and misleading attacks. Visit www.CheckTheTruth.com and examine the record and judge the facts yourself.

Mainers know our communities, our challenges, and what matters most to our neighbors. And they know me. I will keep listening to you and working on what makes a difference in your lives: stronger families, stronger communities, and a future where more Mainers can afford to stay and thrive. I ask for your vote on November 3rd so that I can continue my work for you.

Susan Collins.
Independent Leadership,
Delivering for Maine

- Social Security Fairness Act. Susan authored the law that provides full Social Security benefits to more than 25,000 retired Maine teachers, law enforcement, and firefighters.
- Protecting Medicaid and Investing in Rural Health Care. Susan secured more than $190 million this year alone to maintain & improve access to quality healthcare and she was named a "Medicaid Champion."
- Paycheck Protection Program. During the pandemic, Susan wrote the law that saved more than 250,000 Maine jobs and small businesses.

Susan Collins' experience and leadership are making a difference for Maine.

☑ On November 3, vote for Susan Collins.
