Maine Constitution display visits Turner

Nicole Van Tassel Photos

Turner Historical Museum President Linda Poland talks with Annabelle Eaton about the Maine Constitution Display that visited Turner in October.

Some local homeschoolers from the Turner area are looking at special reprints of the Maine Constitution that deal with Article X about the Land Rights Treaty Maine/Massachusetts made with the Wabanaki nation in 1875.

By Bill Van Tassel

TURNER - Beginning in early October, three pages of the Maine Constitution have been touring some Maine cultural institutions and historical museums, with the first public display at the Bates College Ladd Library on September 21. The next stop for the glass display case was the Turner Historical Museum that I visited.

Representing just 15 percent of the entire document, these three pages were special as they contained some passages that had not been seen in printed copies of the Maine Constitution in 150 years. Another unique reason was that these particular pages detailed information in Article 10, section 7, that was relevant to Maine's land rights treaty with the Wabanaki Nations.

The section identified the state's responsibilities to uphold the terms of the treaty upon Maine's separation from Massachusetts in 1820. In 2023, the people of Maine voted to repeal Article X and add Section 7 to the Maine Constitution. The terms of this treaty were in the original document in 1875 but disappeared from the last printed version. They had apparently been covered over with invisible ink, though still hidden beneath. (Much of this was explained by Professor Joseph Hall in his talk at the Ladd Library in September of this year.)

Shortly before the travelling display began its tour of Maine, Secretary of State Shenna Bellows, with help from Chief Justice Valerie Stanfill, had the newly arranged three pages specially printed on Vellum using a 19th century letter press owned by Wolfe Editions in Porland.

Linda Poland, President of Turner Historical Museum, monitored the time that the display was in the museum and shared with visitors the pertinent information. After the newly reprint had its debut at Bates College's Ladd Library in September, Poland learned that Turner's museum was one of the few sites that met the qualifications: temperature control, and a good space that was secure. The space was located on the ground floor of the Leavitt Institute Building, two floors below the Historical Museum.

Poland enjoyed explaining some of the details about the three old-looking pages to a group of young homeschoolers. "The kids really surprised that the printer of the sheets had to place each letter of several hundred words on the old-fashioned press." This was done by Wolfe Edition printers to maintain the feel of the original document.

The Maine Constitutional Display is now gone from its week-long visit to Turner, but the other exhibits in the Historical Museum on the building's third floor. It is still open (Thursdays from 12-4 and Saturdays from 9-1) to visitors who may be curious about Turners' past. [Turner was settled just before the start of the American Revolution and incorporated into Massachusetts/Maine Commonwealth (until 1820) as 'Turner' in 1786.]

Three year old grandson was excited to visit grandma's house, was running around barefoot on the deck. It was still March in Maine so that was still snow in the yard. When I had a snowball hit me, I realized he was going barefoot into the snow. "Aren't your feet cold?" "Oh, no. I have imagination!" He said. Dave Carrington

I was showing my granddaughter where we used to go fishing in Lake Ontario, when my great grandson Carson, took my reading glasses, looked at the map and said : "Wow, I can see the fish in the water!" Annie Nightengale, New Sharon

Reader Submissions: What does Veterans Day mean to me

Veterans Day is more than a date on the calendar. It is a time to remember the people who served alongside me and the sacrifices made by fellow veterans and their families.

Hello, my name is Jeff Kirkpatrick. During the Vietnam War, I served as an Army Combat Assault Helicopter pilot. I served there in 1970-71. The work demanded skill, courage, and trust in fellow crew members. Those experiences left a lasting mark—not only in memories of service, but in the bonds formed with others who understood the challenges.

Today, Veterans Day offers a chance to reflect on that chapter and honor all who have worn the uniform. Its meaning is found in remembering those who served, recognizing the cost of service, and appreciating the support veterans receive at home.

"Veterans Day reminds me that service is shared, and that is why I joined the VFW. I can keep on giving to my fellow vets here in the Harrison-Waterford, ME area."

We remember our fellow veterans, and we're grateful when our communities remember us.

I was in the Maine Guards for 11-1/2 years. My dad was a Korean War veteran and impressed on me, the oldest of six, the importance of service and loyalty to our country.

He had worked in Intelligence in the Philippines. Back then they communicated in Morse Code, and I found it fascinating as he talked to me in "dots" and "dashes."

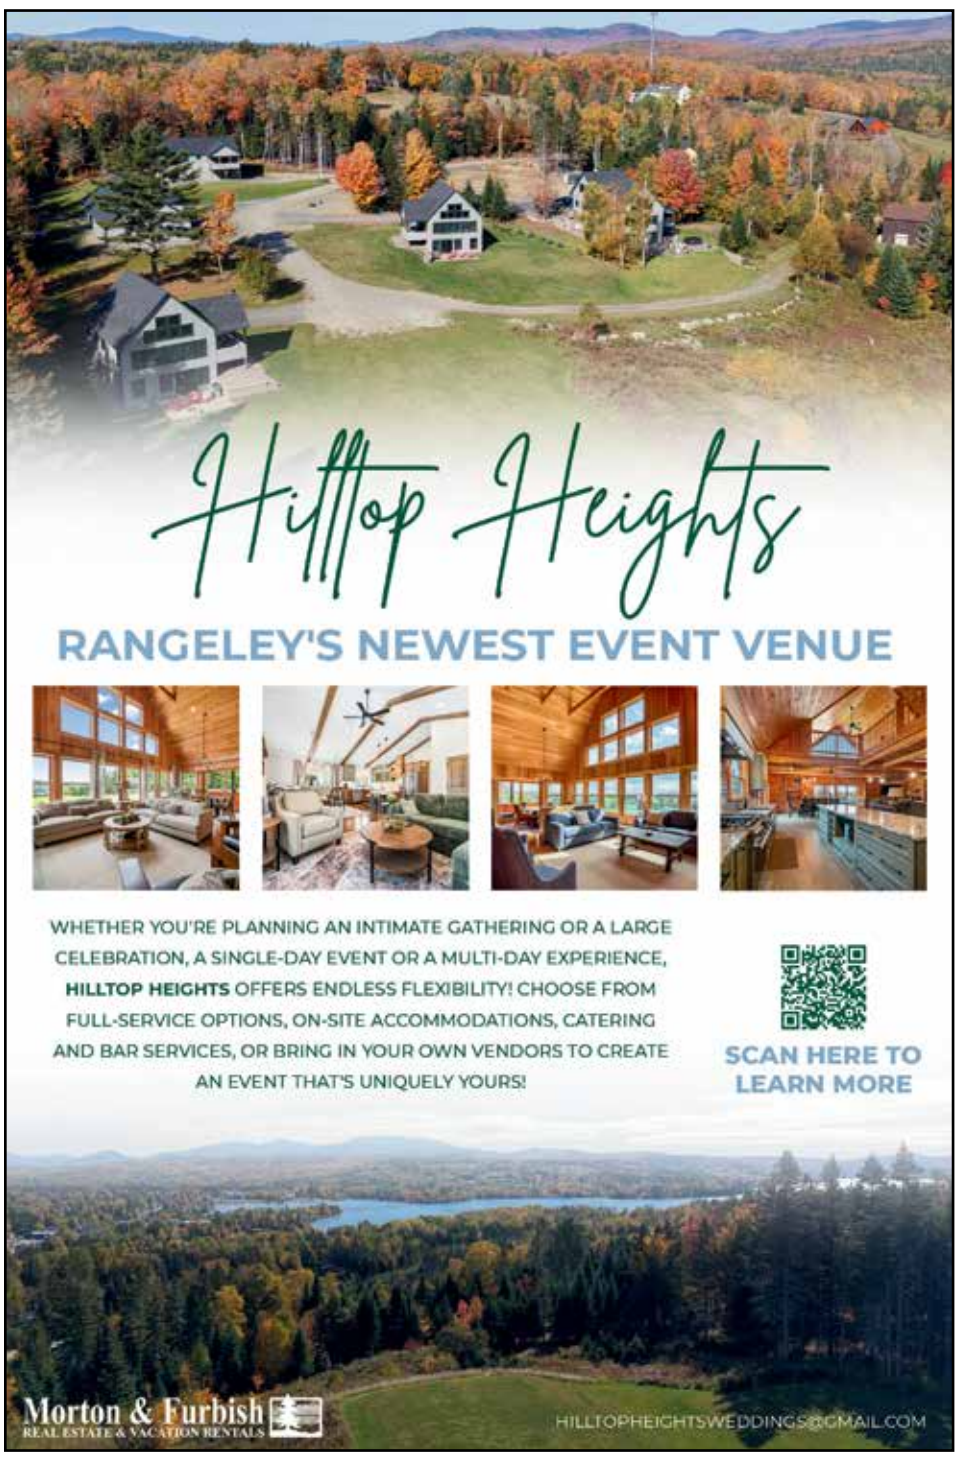

When I was a sophomore at U-Maine in Orono, I saw a poster stating that the Army Guard was recruiting. It was 1977 and the military branches were looking for recruits post-Vietnam. Recalling dad's message and commitment, I went to the office and signed up!

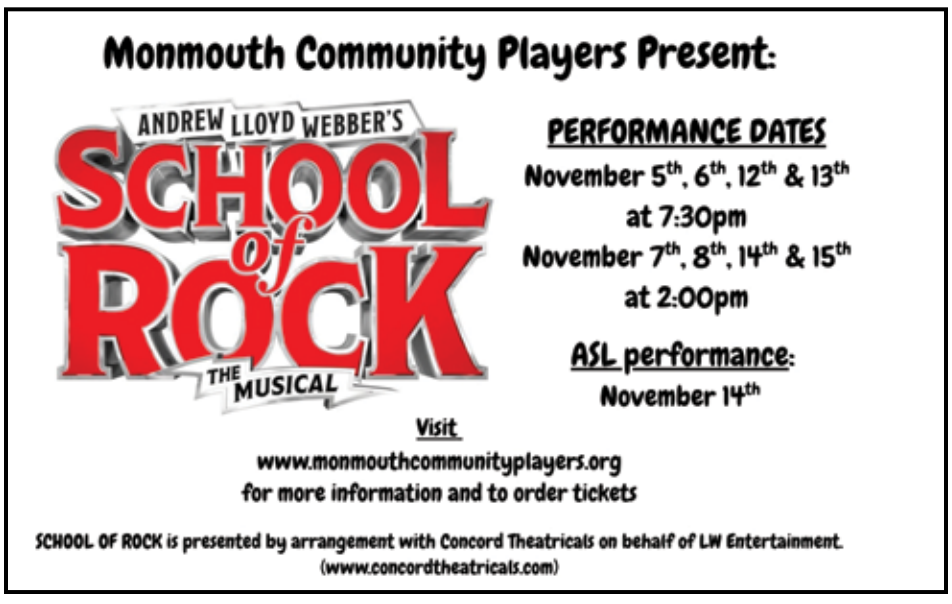

My time in the Guards meant everything to me. I worked alongside many Vietnam War veterans and found their commitment inspiring. Understandably, they would not talk about their tours in Vietnam except perhaps for a great loss of comrades. I understood it better years later when I watched Ken Burns' series on Vietnam, and I cried and cried.

As for my honorable discharge as an E-5 specialist, my section sergeant insisted I leave as the Gulf War was beginning. He was a Vietnam War veteran and did not want to see me killed, as his best friend had been over there. At that time, in 1991, Guardsman could out-process if they had a conflict with their civilian job, which was the case with me.

To this day I regret not staying in for 20 years. My years in the Guards have stood me well. With the American flag as my banner, I recall with admiration every soldier I worked with all those years ago and deeply respect those who have chosen to serve since.

Leavitt High School Class of 1960 continues a special tradition

Submitted photo

TURNER - Since 2020, members of the Leavitt High School Class of 1960 have been gathering at The Highland Grille to enjoy good food, friendship, and the opportunity to reminisce about days gone by.

Joyce Sarchi has had the pleasure and honor of serving these wonderful folks and looks forward to their visit every year. It is a special occasion filled with laughter, stories, and the joy of reconnecting with old friends.

Some friendships are simply too special to let time get in the way, and this wonderful group is proof that the bonds formed long ago can continue to bring people together year after year.

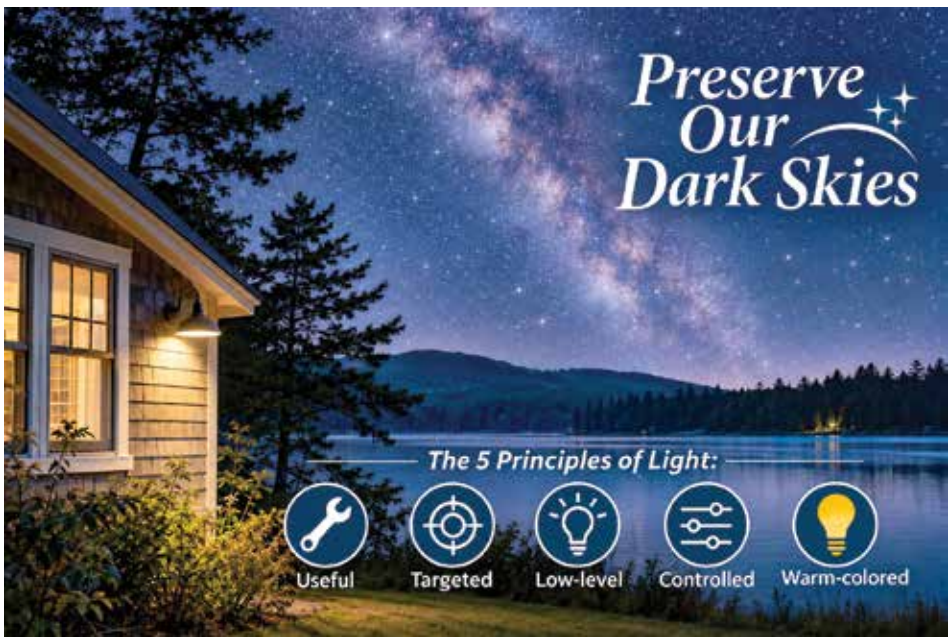

Becoming a dark sky community

A Dark Sky Community designation lets the world know we care about keeping our stars visible and that we are working hard to achieve this. There is nothing like looking up at the sky and seeing millions of stars swirling around our Milky Way Galaxy. Sky gazing has increased in popularity and is giving a boost to tourism. More than 80% of the country lives under light polluted skies and cannot see the stars at night. Here in western Maine, we are lucky to still be able to see them. Being a Dark Sky community does not mean turning off every light. Proper lighting used when and where necessary is the key. Here's how.

Avoid those spotlights on the corner of the house or garage that light up your yard. Ever notice when you pull into the driveway and those big lights come on you need to squint to see. Like someone pointing a flashlight in your face. You are temporarily blinded by the light. Use a shield that directs the light downward where it is needed on the ground.

Use a motion sensor on your lights so they go off when no longer required. Animals have very good night vision and appreciate the darkness.

Fixtures mounted under eaves should be fully recessed, so the bulb does not drop below it. Glare is the result of seeing a bulb hanging below the light fixture. Glare inhibits visibility rather than enhances it. Well-placed lights are the key.

Use amber bulbs to curb the glare that white bulbs produce. Eliminate the high contrast of white light, and you actually see more.

While stringing festival lights all over your deck or yard looks pretty for a party, having them on every night adds a lot of light to the night sky. Use them when you're outside enjoying a gathering, but please remember to turn them off when you go inside.

Seasonal holiday lights are fun and please continue to create joy by decorating your house and yard.

Remember 5 principles of light: Useful, Targeted, Low-level, Controlled, Warm-colored.

Notable Thanksgiving traditions

Metro

Thanksgiving is a family-centric holiday that revolves around the dinner table and encourages celebrants to acknowledge all that they have to be thankful for. Thanksgiving is celebrated in October in Canada and in November in the United States.

Many Thanksgiving traditions focus on community events and sumptuous feasts, but they don't stop there. Here are some of the more notable traditions people can embrace on this day of giving thanks.

• Roasting turkey: Many foods will grace the Thanksgiving dinner table, but turkey is the star of the show. Roasting remains the most popular way to cook a turkey, but deep-fried and even rotisserie turkey have become more popular in recent years.

• Watching the parade: Millions of people tune into the broadcast of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and many more line the streets of New York City to watch it in person. The Macy's parade was first held on November 27, 1924, and was only suspended for three years during World War II. The parade features musical events, special guests and pop culture balloons that navigate streets lined with skyscrapers.

• Turkey trotting: Believe it or not, wild turkeys can run at speeds up to 25 miles per hour in short bursts, according to Lake Erie Nature & Science Center. Perhaps inspired by these speedy birds, turkey trots are popular on Thanksgiving Day. People of all ages start the holiday by running or walking in these charity events.

• Watching football: Watching professional football on television is a popular Thanksgiving custom. The Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys always host an afternoon game on Thanksgiving. Each year, the National Football League also schedules a third matchup in primetime featuring other teams. In 2026, the lineup features: Chicago Bears at Detroit Lions (1:00 p.m. ET), Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys (4:00 p.m. ET) and Kansas City Chiefs at Buffalo Bills (8:20 p.m. ET).

Metro photo

• Early holiday decorating: Many households will decorate for Christmas immediately following the clearing of the Thanksgiving turkey from the table. Some may even decorate before guests arrive on Thanksgiving.

• Tuning into "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving": Some families watch this beloved Charlie Brown television special the night before Thanksgiving, enjoying the movie's snack menu of jelly beans, popcorn and toast.

• Celebrate "Friendsgiving": People who may not have relatives close by often gather with close friends to commemorate friendships and express their gratitude for one another.

Thanksgiving marks the first holiday during the whirlwind celebratory season. It's filled with many traditions that people across the United States and Canada enjoy.

AARP Fraud Watch Network

Give Robocalls the Busy Signal

Robocalls can be more than just annoying. While some automated calls are legitimate, others are used by criminals to steal money or personal information. These calls may promise prizes, demand payment for debts you don't owe or claim to come from a trusted organization.

Scammers can manipulate caller ID to make a call appear to come from a local number or a legitimate business. They may also use stolen personal information and artificial intelligence to make their calls more convincing. Even if a number looks familiar, that doesn't mean the caller can be trusted.

To protect yourself, avoid answering calls from unknown numbers. If you answer a suspicious robocall, hang up without pressing any buttons. Check with your phone provider about call-blocking options and consider adding your number to DoNotCall.gov. While this can reduce unwanted telemarketing calls, it won't stop scammers who ignore the rules.

Turner Publishing

Turner Publishing Media is a family-owned and operated business established in Turner, Maine, in 1992. We have been supporting schools, children's sports and academics, as well as promoting businesses and the communities we serve for over 32 years. All of Turner Publishing's publications are Maine Made. Our printers use soy inks and solar methods to protect the environment while printing our publications. Our paper suppliers use power from hydroelectric sources and work with local plants to use waste heat; heat that would otherwise be sent into the environment, to help produce the steam needed in the papermaking process.

We were told 100% of the chips used for the newsprint come from waste streams of other processes, such as the waste from lumber mills. Our newsprint producers also have a process to ensure that all fiber supplies come from forests that are managed for sustainability and comply with forest management principles.

The chips go through a thermo-mechanical pulp-making process, which involves a combination of steam and mechanical force to break the chips into a "slurry" of water and fibers. Giant machines work the chips into a mixture that is mostly water. This mixture is then sent to a process to brighten the paper.

Newsprint is grayer than most other commercial papers. This is because the process of whitening newsprint does not use chlorine or other stronger agents and focuses on environmentally safe practices.

For this reason, we ask you to support Turner Publishing and the businesses in this publication and shop locally. Turner Publishing is not only doing its part to be environmentally responsible to save our planet, Turner Publishing promotes all the good things happening in the community and we donate over $300,000 annually in media sponsorships to non-profits, churches, historical museums, and the arts. The businesses in our publications help us do this with their ad revenue (support them as well), so that the good can keep spreading. "It's All Good News" and thank you for reading!
