Three year old grandson was excited to visit grandma's house and was running around barefoot on the deck. It was still March in Maine so that was still snow in the yard. When I had a snowball hit me, I realized he was going barefoot into the snow. "Aren't your feet cold?" "Oh, no. I have imagination!" He said.

Dave Carrington

I was showing my granddaughter where we used to go fishing in Lake Ontario, when my great grandson Carson, took my reading glasses, looked at the map and said : "Wow, I can see the fish in the water!"

Get ready for Maine's firearms deer hunting season

AUGUSTA - The woods are calling, and Maine's firearms deer hunting season is almost here!

Maine residents can take to the woods beginning this Saturday, October 31, and nonresidents can join the hunt beginning on Monday, November 2.

The Maine Warden Service wants to remind hunters that preparation and safety are key to a successful season. Before opening day, take time to check your gear, fine-tune your plans, and review a few important safety reminders.

Whether you're returning to a familiar stand or exploring a new area, a little preparation and good judgment go a long way toward a safe, memorable hunt.

Before heading into the woods:

Know your firearm. Check that it's in good working order and always treat it as if it's loaded. Keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction, carry it safely, and be sure of your target and what lies beyond it.

Review treestand safety. Always wear a full-body safety harness and use a safety line. Once safely secured, use a haul line to raise your unloaded firearm. Check for hazardous trees and branches before setting up.

Plan for the unexpected. Tell someone where you're hunting and when you expect to return. Bring a compass, a survival kit, and the supplies you need if you're delayed or conditions change.

Get your spot ready. Do some last-minute scouting, confirm landowner's permission, check your equipment, and make sure you're familiar with the area.

Hunt responsibly. Know the regulations for your Wildlife Management District (WMD), respect other outdoor users, and make safety your top priority.

We wish you a safe and memorable season in the Maine woods. Look out for one another, respect the resource, and make the most of your time outdoors.

MOVIE REVIEW by Lucas Allen

You Can See Everything

(A24)

A lot has been written and talked about the notorious health pioneer Elizabeth Holmes, who managed to defraud investors in bringing her dream company Theranos to life, only to be convicted and sentenced to prison. The widely acclaimed Hulu limited series "The Dropout," starring Emmy and Golden Globe winner Amanda Seyfried as Holmes, may have been enough, but perhaps there's more to her than what the media portrays. The new documentary "You Can See Everything" from acclaimed filmmakers Nathan Fielder ("Nathan for You") and Lance Oppenheim (this year's terrific "Primetime") takes the viewer on a mind-bending journey through the lens of both filmmaker and subject.

With 34 days until her prison sentence, Holmes invited Fielder to document her private life with her partner, hotel heir Billy Evans, and their two young children. The documentary's birds-eye view helps reveal the couple dealing with the fallout of her 2018 trial and indictment not just with the Hulu miniseries, but with the way the media tends to portray her as a pathological liar and manipulative. At the same time, they reveal early plans to resurrect Theranos and perfect her original vision once more. Doubtful, Fielder tries to understand her ambitions through both Billy and her supportive parents.

After the beginning of her prison sentence, Billy is left in charge of running Theranos and immediately comes off as controlling, including taking over the making of the documentary. It is especially alarming when Fielder finds out that Evans is using her image to promote the newly rebranded company and create an AI double of her, along with using her social media accounts. However, the filmmaker has a few tricks up his sleeve to save his project.

With a nearly three-hour documentary, the pacing can be slow at times, though it is more of a stylistic choice by the filmmakers. Its pace is there to make the viewer feel right at home in the lives of these subjects and, at the same time, let them process each moment to understand the events that follow. In fact, getting used to slow pacing helps to surprise the viewer when the film's second half drops the shoe.

Fielder certainly has a close eye on his subject, especially when he involves himself heavily in their lives. Throughout the feature, he can peel back the layers on their personalities to the point where there is something hidden beneath them that is eye-opening and terrifying. There is a scene where he shows Holmes and Evans a clip of the classic Abbott & Costello routine "Who's on First" as a way to show how such hilariously confusing miscommunication pretty much mirrors how they are trying to bring their new ambition to the table. It also turns this documentary into a subversive and incendiary indictment on how the blurred line between fact and fiction can be misconstrued to get to the truth.

The first half of the film centers squarely on Holmes herself basically a loving mother and a smart businesswoman, but there is still an air of mistrust about her that is just as fascinating. After she goes to prison, the second half deals with Billy's growing control and paranoia as a business owner, leading to some uneasy moments for Fielder to confront. When you put these two halves into perspective, it leaves you with questions about each of their sanity and how they really function as a couple.

At first, Seyfried appears mainly to help reenact Fielder's conversations with Holmes alongside actor Christopher Abbott as Billy, coming off as unnecessary padding. But her involvement becomes clearer as the second half rolls along, as a way for anyone who has seen "The Dropout" to rethink when fact and fiction overlap. Not to mention, watching the actress be herself and take on her Holmes role a little differently could be something award-worthy in its own way.

Without hyperbole, "You Can See Everything" certainly lives up to the hype for being a pop culture explosion while also carving out its own space in the documentary genre. It will provoke different reactions from audiences everywhere about the nature of subjectivity versus exposing the real truths. In the end, it is an unforgettable experience from beginning to end that absolutely surprises at every turn.

MOOSE TALK

Of all my assorted big game hunts, the celebrated Maine moose hunt gets top billing for just plain fun, challenges and, at times, downright frustration. Over the years I have either hunted with a permit or have been part of a moose hunting party. Most of my hunts have been cow hunts, except for two bull hunts. My last hunt, this fall, was a bull hunt and I and my chain saw power winch were invited along as guests.

Moose signs were as plentiful as I have ever seen, but sightings were scarce. At the least three times we had bulls answering our cow in heat calls only to "hang up" just out of range or in thick cover. Frustrating! Common sense said that our calling strategy or techniques were just not up to snuff. What were we doing wrong?

I went to the experts to try and get an answer to that question.

In his 2006 book "Moose Hunting" moose guide Dave Kelso devotes a chapter to moose calling. Kelso's information has a credible component inasmuch as he has worked with Maryo Peppin and studied moose in captivity at the Buck Expert Research Center. Here are some highlights: 1) Effective calling involves many variables and you need to adjust your vocalizations to the situation. 2) Although cows are in heat for just 24 hours, it is wrong to assume that bull moose can't be called long after the rut. Just not so says Kelso. 3) The key to a good cow-in-heat call is a call that quivers in tone and softly fades out. 4) Never call before legal shooting time 5) The are two key bull grunts, the fight grunt and the love grunt. Learn the difference. When answering a bull with a raking of the brush or the volume of the call, try to sound bigger than he is. 6) Mouth or voice calls are the best. 7) Raking brush is an art form when communicating with an incoming bull. Always pause between the rakes. (A bull will not rake or call at the same time.)

Moose guide Tenley Skofield has many hunts under her belt. Here are some of her thoughts:

Once you have scouted or discovered a productive area to hunt, be aware of wind direction and keep it in your face. Start with a lightly tickling brush with a scapula, antler, or antler imitation. In the stillness of breaking down, that little bit of brush rustling will sometimes be enough to get a conversation started. Too often a calling sequence begins too loud and too frequent and will push moose away rather than pull them in.

In moose calling, patience is a virtue. Bulls sometimes take their merry old time "coming in."

The same goes with first calls. If you are making your first call in an area and are unsure if moose are in the vicinity, call lightly at first in each of the four directions. Listen, call again and again every 15 minutes or so as you move slowly and quietly. Gradually increase volume. There may or may not be a moose to hear your calls. Continue calling for an hour, minimum. Two hours is not too much time to invest in opening a conversation with a moose, especially one coming in silence. You'll only know those moose are approaching by the sound of a snapped branch or antlers moving through the brush.

The most underrated element to calling is being quiet. Have a plan in place as you begin, communicate with your party using hand signals and whisper only if absolutely necessary. Unnatural sounds, like talking, clanging shooting sticks, zippers, and crackling packs and wrappers will spook a moose and ruin any chance of calling one in to shooting range.

Highly experienced moose guide Nathan Theriault from OMM Outfitters offers these tips;

• Cow Calls: Avoid calling too loudly or frequently. Focus on a slow, drawn-out, nasal tone and proper cadence to attract bulls during the peak of the rut.

• Pacing and Patience: Bulls move slowly and may take hours to approach while checking the wind. Sit tight and avoid moving prematurely to refrain from spooking game.

• Wind and Setup: Always set up with the wind in your face. Mature bulls typically circle downwind before appearing, so position your caller and shooter accordingly.

• Mouth Calling vs. Electronic Callers: Mouth calling and horns allow real-time adaptability. Unlike electronic callers, live calling enables you to adjust pitch, volume, and cadence based on the bull's reactions and behavior.

My final thought. A Maine moose hunting permit is a gift that could be a once in a lifetime hunt. It pays to be ready. Calling is critical, especially during the rut. Consider doing more homework and practicing the art of moose calling. Only then will you truly be ready. I plan to heed my own advice on this one.

MERCURY

Q. Can you get cancer from eating fish that contains mercury?

There is no strong evidence that mercury causes cancer in humans. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR), and the World Health Organization's International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) do not classify environmental mercury as a known or probable human carcinogen.

Primary health concerns surrounding mercury center on its neurological and kidney toxicity, rather than cancer risk.

Mercury, a liquid metal also known as quicksilver, combines with carbon to make organic mercury compounds; methylmercury is the most common one. Methylmercury is made primarily by microscopic organisms in water and soil.

Methylmercury builds up in the tissues of fish. Larger and older fish tend to have the highest levels of mercury. Research shows that most people's fish consumption does not cause health concerns.

Almost all fish—and shellfish—contain traces of mercury. However, some fish have higher levels of mercury that can harm the developing nervous system of a fetus or young child. The risks from mercury in seafood depend on the amount and type that is consumed.

The EPA and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) give the following advice to those at highest risk such as pregnant women:

• Do not eat shark, swordfish, king mackerel or tilefish. These have high levels of mercury.

• Eat shrimp, canned light tuna, salmon, pollock, and catfish. These are low in mercury.

Albacore, or white meat tuna, has more mercury than canned light tuna.

• Contact your local health department to check local advisories about the safety of fish caught in nearby waters.

(An important added note: fish sticks and fast-food fish sandwiches are usually made from seafood low in mercury.)

Mercury is a naturally occurring element that is found in air, water and soil. In addition, mercury enters the air from mining ore, burning coal and waste, and from manufacturing plants. It enters the water or soil from natural deposits, disposal of waste, and volcanic activity.

Exposure to mercury occurs from breathing contaminated air, ingesting contaminated water and food, and having dental and medical treatments.

Pure mercury has been used to make thermometers, switches, pressure gauges, fluorescent bulbs, button batteries, thermostats, dental fillings and medicines.

In recent years, there has been a growing focus on the need to decrease the use of mercury in products and to prevent mercury in existing products from entering the waste stream. Several states have passed legislation to reduce mercury in waste.

So how about those fillings in your mouth?

Dental amalgam is a silver-colored material used to restore teeth that have cavities. Dental amalgam is made of liquid mercury and a powder containing silver, tin, copper, zinc and other metals. Mercury concentration in dental amalgam is generally about 50 percent by weight.

Is dental amalgam safe?

For the vast majority of people, dental amalgam is not considered a health threat by major regulatory bodies, including the FDA and the American Dental Association (ADA).

What does Veterans Day mean to me

Veterans Day is more than a date on the calendar. It is a time to remember the people who served alongside me and the sacrifices made by fellow veterans and their families.

Hello, my name is Jeff Kirkpatrick. During the Vietnam War, I served as an Army Combat Assault Helicopter pilot. I served there in 1970-71. The work demanded skill, courage, and trust in fellow crew members. Those experiences left a lasting mark—not only in memories of service, but in the bonds formed with others who understood the challenges.

Today, Veterans Day offers a chance to reflect on that chapter and honor all who have worn the uniform. Its meaning is found in remembering those who served, recognizing the cost of service, and appreciating the support veterans receive at home.

"Veterans Day reminds me that service is shared, and that is why I joined the VFW. I can keep on giving to my fellow vets here in the Harrison-Waterford, ME area."

We remember our fellow veterans, and we're grateful when our communities remember us.

We all need it – STRETCH!

Yesterday, right in the middle of my workday, I received a phone call from my sister in Florida.

"What are you doing?" She asked.

"I'm doing my cats and cows," I replied.

"What?" She said, sounding a little confused.

"Yoga stretches!" I explained.

"I thought you were working!"

"I am! But my coworker inspired me to start stretching throughout the day. Her physical therapist recommended doing the Cat and Cow poses every hour to help with her back problems. So, I'm supporting her while being proactive about my own health. You know how much I sit during the day!"

My sister laughed and said, "I didn't think you needed any inspiration to do all that wacky stuff!"

Well, she does have a point! But seriously, why shouldn't we all take a few minutes throughout the day to stretch? Whether you're sitting at a desk, working on your feet, driving, cooking, or running around taking care of everyone else, your body deserves a little attention.

I told her, "It's a great idea to get away from your desk or whatever you're doing and stretch every hour. It only takes a couple of minutes, and it's good for all of us. You should try it! You don't have to do anything fancy. Just find a few gentle stretches that feel good."

Like so many women, my sister spends much of her day taking care of others. She's constantly lifting, tugging, pulling, carrying, and doing things for the people around her. Sound familiar?

We can be so busy looking after everyone else that we forget about the one person who needs our attention the most: OURSELVES!

And then came an interesting part of our conversation.

My sister began telling me about a recent trip to the emergency room. Her hips had locked up so badly that she could barely walk! The doctor gave her a cortisone shot and explained that she was extremely tight and needed to work on her mobility and stretching. He also referred her to a physical therapist.

Well, isn't that ironic?

Here I was, encouraging her to stretch, and her body had already sent her a pretty loud message that it was time to pay attention!

"How wonderful!" I told her. "To all you physical therapists out there, I LOVE YOU! And massage therapists, the same goes for you!"

Seriously, these professionals play such an important role in helping people maintain mobility, recover from physical problems, and learn how to take better care of their bodies.

Exercise, stretching, and massage therapy can all be valuable parts of a proactive approach to muscle health and mobility. We shouldn't wait until something hurts or stops working properly before we start paying attention.

Think about it. We sit too much. We stand too much. We bend, lift, twist, carry, reach, and repeat the same movements day after day. Our muscles get tight, our joints get stiff, and sometimes our bodies simply tell us they've had enough!

Why wait until we're in pain to do something about it?

I was so happy to hear that my sister would be seeing a physical therapist. I know she'll benefit from learning the right movements and stretches for her body. I also encouraged her to ask about gentle movements she could incorporate into her day, such as Cat and Cow and Child's Pose, one of my personal favorites.

You don't have to be a yoga expert, join a gym, or spend an hour exercising to start taking better care of yourself. Sometimes all it takes is getting up, moving around, taking a few deep breaths, and giving your muscles a little attention.

Here's my challenge to you: STRETCH!

Set a reminder on your phone if you have to. Get away from your computer. Step away from whatever you're doing. Give yourself five minutes every hour to move and stretch gently.

And remember, if you have pain, injury, or limited mobility, get professional guidance about which movements are right for you.

We are often so busy taking care of everyone and everything else that we forget to take care of ourselves. But our bodies carry us through every single day. Don't they deserve a little love in return?

So, let's stop putting ourselves at the bottom of the priority list. Be proactive. Keep moving. Keep stretching. Your body will thank you!

Live Long. Live Well.

Notable Thanksgiving traditions

Metro

Thanksgiving is a family-centric holiday that revolves around the dinner table and encourages celebrants to acknowledge all that they have to be thankful for. Thanksgiving is celebrated in October in Canada and in November in the United States.

Many Thanksgiving traditions focus on community events and sumptuous feasts, but they don't stop there. Here are some of the more notable traditions people can embrace on this day of giving thanks.

• Roasting turkey: Many foods will grace the Thanksgiving dinner table, but turkey is the star of the show. Roasting remains the most popular way to cook a turkey, but deep-fried and even rotisserie turkey have become more popular in recent years.

• Watching the parade: Millions of people tune into the broadcast of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and many more line the streets of New York City to watch it in person. The Macy's parade was first held on November 27, 1924, and was only suspended for three years during World War II. The parade features musical events, special guests and pop culture balloons that navigate streets lined with skyscrapers.

• Turkey trotting: Believe it or not, wild turkeys can run at speeds up to 25 miles per hour in short bursts, according to Lake Erie Nature & Science Center. Perhaps inspired by these speedy birds, turkey trots are popular on Thanksgiving Day. People of all ages start the holiday by running or walking in these charity events.

• Watching football: Watching professional football on television is a popular Thanksgiving custom. The Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys always host an afternoon game on Thanksgiving. Each year, the National Football League also schedules a third matchup in primetime featuring other teams. In 2026, the lineup features: Chicago Bears at Detroit Lions (1:00 p.m. ET), Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys (4:00 p.m. ET) and Kansas City Chiefs at Buffalo Bills (8:20 p.m. ET).

Metro photo

• Early holiday decorating: Many households will decorate for Christmas immediately following the clearing of the Thanksgiving turkey from the table. Some may even decorate before guests arrive on Thanksgiving.

• Tuning into "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving": Some families watch this beloved Charlie Brown television special the night before Thanksgiving, enjoying the movie's snack menu of jelly beans, popcorn and toast.

• Celebrate "Friendsgiving": People who may not have relatives close by often gather with close friends to commemorate friendships and express their gratitude for one another.

Thanksgiving marks the first holiday during the whirlwind celebratory season. It's filled with many traditions that people across the United States and Canada enjoy.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL returns to The Public Theatre!

This holiday season, for one weekend only, The Public Theatre presents its acclaimed adaptation of A Christmas Carol, Dec 11-13. This inventive version, performed by six actors and a fiddler, was developed at The Public Theatre by former Executive/Co-Artistic Director Christopher Schario. It has since been published and performed by theatres around the world and is now a Lewiston/Auburn tradition.

With all the different versions of A Christmas Carol, The Public Theatre's adaptation remains many people's favorite. This version begins with a child reading Dickens' novel as five actors and a fiddler suddenly appear to coax him into joining the story. Live music and sound effects create a magical atmosphere, bringing the story to life in a way you've never seen before.

Only $15 for children 18 and under. Introduce a child to the magic of professional theatre and give them a gift that will last a lifetime. Don't forget that Gift Certificates and instant E-Gifts make great gifts this Holiday Season!

A Christmas Carol: December 11 @ 7pm, Dec 12 @ 2pm and 7pm and Dec 13 @ 2 pm. Tickets at ThePublicTheatre.org or call 782-3200. The Public Theatre is located at 31 Maple St., Lewiston.

MINOT COMMUNITY NEWS CORNER November 2026

First, we want to thank everyone who voted in November's general election! There were a total of 1,646 votes cast, which is 83% voter turnout! You can see the full results on the Town's website or Facebook page. A special thanks goes to Sara Farris and her team for the smooth process and well-run system that she managed. If you have any questions about the voting process in Minot, or to check/change your status, please feel free to reach out to the Town Office and the staff would be happy to assist you.

As we transition from fall into winter, we have a lot of programs that will help with the season. There is the Eda's Elf fund, that provides individuals and families with holiday meal items for Thanksgiving and Christmas as well as presents for children in the program. The Town Office is currently accepting donations of non-perishable food, unopened toys/toiletries or cash. The "Giving Tree" will be up by the week of Thanksgiving with tags for specific presents for individuals. If you know of someone who would benefit from this program, please contact the Town Office or fill out the online form found on the website/Facebook. The program is free and confidential for individuals in Minot or the Minot Consolidated School.

There is also the General Assistance Program that offers assistance for general living expenses, including utilities, food and heat. The program is income and situation based, and those interested need to fill out an application and provide supporting documentation. There are also Town-based resources that may be available for individuals who do not meet the State's guidelines. Please reach out to staff to discuss your options and learn more about whether you qualify.

Finally, the Town Office will be closed on the following dates:

Thursday & Friday, November 26th & 27th for Thanksgiving

Online resources will still be available during those times, and we hope you have safe and happy holidays.

By November, the last bit of Autumn warmth is mostly behind us. Sure, there are still a few brisk fall days for outdoor fun or the last bit of yard work, but the stacks of wood pellets in front of hardware stores and fuel trucks delivering home heating oil are a solid reminder that winter will soon be here; along with the heating bills.

Home heating oil use in Maine has declined over the last 15 years. Currently, about 50% of Maine households depend upon fuel oil as the primary source of heat, and the increasing cost of home heating oil is a major concern for many families. The Maine Department of Energy Resources' (maine.gov/energy/home) most recent survey of home heating fuel prices reported that the statewide average price for heating oil was $6.02 per gallon, representing an 81 percent increase from last fall. Homeowners can expect to pay about $740 more to fill up a standard 275-gallon oil tank than they did a year ago. These price increases will certainly impact household budgets for Mainers of all ages.

Maine Housing helped over 45,000 households stay warm last winter through the Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) or LIHEAP and the Energy Crisis Intervention Program (ECIP). HEAP helps qualified homeowners and renters pay for heating costs, and ECIP helps eligible Mainers who are at risk of losing their heating source. Both programs are administered through Maine Housing and nine local Community Action Agencies. Maine Housing's website has information about the energy conservation and heating assistance programs to help Mainers stay warm this winter. Applications are online as well at mainehousing.org.

Home heating bills are not the only utility expense that increases over the winter. Electric bills and other utility bills may cost more as well. The Maine Public Utility Commission (PUC) lists several resources to help families who are struggling to pay their bills (maine.gov/mpuc/consumer-assistance/programs). The website has practical first steps to help families contact their utility companies to discuss possible payment options or other assistance that might be available.

There is no doubt that Mainers are resourceful. We already turn the thermostat down and put on an extra sweater to save on energy bills. Before we need to reach for a third sweater, it is a good idea to make a plan for the upcoming heating bills. The Maine Housing and the PUC websites have useful resources to help us be prepared when winter arrives.

As always, please check out our upcoming events and programs and be sure to bring a friend. I hope to see you soon!

AARP Fraud Watch Network

Give Robocalls the Busy Signal

Robocalls can be more than just annoying. While some automated calls are legitimate, others are used by criminals to steal money or personal information. These calls may promise prizes, demand payment for debts you don't owe or claim to come from a trusted organization.

Scammers can manipulate caller ID to make a call appear to come from a local number or a legitimate business. They may also use stolen personal information and artificial intelligence to make their calls more convincing. Even if a number looks familiar, that doesn't mean the caller can be trusted.

To protect yourself, avoid answering calls from unknown numbers. If you answer a suspicious robocall, hang up without pressing any buttons. Check with your phone provider about call-blocking options and consider adding your number to DoNotCall.gov. While this can reduce unwanted telemarketing calls, it won't stop scammers who ignore the rules.

Turner Publishing

Turner Publishing Media is a family-owned and operated business established in Turner, Maine, in 1992. We have been supporting schools, children's sports and academics, as well as promoting businesses and the communities we serve for over 32 years. All of Turner Publishing's publications are Maine Made. Our printers use soy inks and solar methods to protect the environment while printing our publications. Our paper suppliers use power from hydroelectric sources and work with local plants to use waste heat; heat that would otherwise be sent into the environment, to help produce the steam needed in the papermaking process.

We were told 100% of the chips used for the newsprint come from waste streams of other processes, such as the waste from lumber mills. Our newsprint producers also have a process to ensure that all fiber supplies come from forests that are managed for sustainability and comply with forest management principles.

The chips go through a thermo-mechanical pulp-making process, which involves a combination of steam and mechanical force to break the chips into a "slurry" of water and fibers. Giant machines work the chips into a mixture that is mostly water. This mixture is then sent to a process to brighten the paper.

Newsprint is grayer than most other commercial papers. This is because the process of whitening newsprint does not use chlorine or other stronger agents and focuses on environmentally safe practices.

For this reason, we ask you to support Turner Publishing and the businesses in this publication and shop locally. Turner Publishing is not only doing its part to be environmentally responsible to save our planet, Turner Publishing promotes all the good things happening in the community and we donate over $300,000 annually in media sponsorships to non-profits, churches, historical museums, and the arts. The businesses in our publications help us do this with their ad revenue (support them as well), so that the good can keep spreading. "It's All Good News" and thank you for reading!
