RANGELEY — The Rangeley Lakes Region Chamber of Commerce has been named the 2026 Chamber of the Year by the Maine State Chamber of Commerce. The award was presented Thursday, October 1, at the Maine State Chamber's Annual Meeting, Dinner & Gubernatorial Debate at the Cross Insurance Arena in Portland.

The Dana F. Connors Chamber of the Year Award recognizes outstanding local chambers of commerce across Maine for their leadership, community impact, and contributions to the state's business environment. The Rangeley Lakes Region Chamber was a finalist for the award in both 2025 and 2026.

"This is an exciting moment for our community and our organization," said Alexandra Kaiser, Executive Director of the Rangeley Lakes Region Chamber of Commerce. "I couldn't be prouder of our small but mighty team, our dedicated board, and the incredible community we serve. This recognition belongs to everyone who shows up for the Rangeley Lakes Region every day." More than 400 business, government, and community leaders from across Maine attended the event. In addition to the Chamber of the Year Award, the evening included the presentation of the Dirigo Award to The Geiger Family and Geiger for more than 140 years of contributions to Maine's economy, as well as a live gubernatorial debate presented in partnership with NEWS CENTER Maine.

Three year old grandson was excited to visit grandma's house, was running around barefoot on the deck. It was still March in Maine so that was still snow in the yard. When I had a snowball hit me, I realized he was going barefoot into the snow. "Aren't your feet cold?" "Oh, no. I have imagination!" He said. Dave Carrington

I was showing my granddaughter where we used to go fishing in Lake Ontario, when my great grandson Carson, took my reading glasses, looked at the map and said : "Wow, I can see the fish in the water!" Annie Nightengale, New Sharon

MOVIE REVIEW by Lucas Allen

Street Fighter (2026)

(Paramount Pictures/Legendary/Capcom)

Much like "Mortal Kombat" that came afterwards, the "Street Fighter" games held a special place in the hearts of 90s kids. However, its past two trips to the big screen were met with fan distaste over the years between the 1994 Jean-Claude Van-Damme cheesefest and the 2009 toned-down "Street Fighter: The Legend of Chun-Li." This time, co-writer/director Kitao Sakurai looks to make the ultimate, fan-definitive adaptation of the games with 2026's Street Fighter and maybe the third time is the charm.

Once partners and friends, young Ken Masters (Noah Centineo) and Ryu (Andrew Koji) separate acrimoniously after the death of their mentor Gouken (Don Lee) with the latter disappearing into civilian life, while the former chooses the life of a pop culture celebrity. Years later, the mysterious Chun-Li (Callina Liang) invites them to take part in the 1993 World Warrior Championship being held in the city of Metrolao by its tyrannical leader M. Bison (David Dastmalchian), who's secretly looking for the strongest to harness his "psycho power." Li herself is also there as an undercover Interpol agent on a personal mission to exact vengeance on Bison for the death of her father. Reluctantly, Ken and Ryu must put aside their issues with each other to fight for the tournament.

Meanwhile, some of the world's strongest also take part, including Guile (Cody Rhodes), Balrog (rapper 50 Cent), Zangief (Olivier Richters), Dhalsim (Vidyut Jammwal), and Vega (Orville Peck). But before the tournament could start, Bison imprisons Ryu in an attempt to find that hidden power he witnessed during the first tournament in '87. Unfortunately, that power belongs to the demonic Akuma (WWE's Roman Reigns), who is waiting to be unleashed for a real fight.

As with last summer's Mortal Kombat II, the movie is basically mostly fighting with less plot. In this case, it has a chance to do some world-building for those unfamiliar with the games, but it is more character-based than any real storytelling structure. So, what you get is a movie that is pretty much 75% action, 14% characterization, and 11% story.

The script itself is also nothing to write home about when it fills to the brim with awkward dialogue and predictable beats. The only bits of exposition dumping happen in two parts, a Metrolao news show hosted by announcer Don Sauvage (comedian Eric Andre) and some animated flashbacks hand drawn as classic Japanese anime. There are important plot points, but they are severely undermined by endless sight gags and cartoonish violence. At least the recent Mortal Kombat movies wisely stay in tone when handling the balance of story and action.

Fans will likely get more out of it with its comical references and impressive choreography that becomes spiritually faithful to those games. In fact, the fight scenes help elevate the entertainment level, possibly higher than expected. The Shoryuken, the Hadoken, the Flash Kick, and the Spinning Piledriver are enough to really excite the masses.

While it does have a good soundtrack of recognizable tunes, the music supervisor seems to have a lapse in knowledge over the use of them in a period setting. The 4 Non-Blondes song "What's Up" (previously used for comedic effect in Masters of the Universe) is heard in scenes taking place in the late-80's despite being released in 1992, and then there are some songs made in the later 90's and early 2000's that somehow ended up in a club scene when it takes place in 1993. It can be pretty distracting, especially for a movie that is not meant to be taken seriously.

Much like the writing, the acting is not all that special, with some going very over-the-top with no sense of subtlety to be found. There are some highlights worth mentioning like Liang being very believable enough to balance out the moody Koji and Centineo's gruffness. Dastmalchian's Bison is an odd departure from the theatricality of the character previously played by the late Raul Julia in the 1994 film, while Reigns is effectively sinister in the secondary villainous role. Though merely a small cameo, Jason Momoa (also one of the film's producers) still becomes one of the movie's best moments as CG Hulk-like Blanka.

The new "Street Fighter" is neither great nor terrible, but this is certainly an odd duck of an action film. It is stylish but lacks substance, it's funny at times, violent when it needs to be, and also crazy insane. It is best recommended for the fans, while non-fans will have to decide how to put up with it.

THE MOVIE'S RATING: PG-13 (for violence/action, bloody images, strong language, sexual references, partial nudity, and brief smoking)

THE CRITIC'S RATING: 2.5 Stars (Out of Four)

What does Veterans Day mean to me

- Reader Submissions -

Veterans Day is more than a date on the calendar. It is a time to remember the people who served alongside me and the sacrifices made by fellow veterans and their families.

Hello, my name is Jeff Kirkpatrick. During the Vietnam War, I served as an Army Combat Assault Helicopter pilot. I served there in 1970-71. The work demanded skill, courage, and trust in fellow crew members. Those experiences left a lasting mark—not only in memories of service, but in the bonds formed with others who understood the challenges.

Today, Veterans Day offers a chance to reflect on that chapter and honor all who have worn the uniform. Its meaning is found in remembering those who served, recognizing the cost of service, and appreciating the support veterans receive at home.

"Veterans Day reminds me that service is shared, and that is why I joined the VFW. I can keep on giving to my fellow vets here in the Harrison-Waterford, ME area."

We remember our fellow veterans, and we're grateful when our communities remember us.

River Valley Rotary Club Hosts the District Governor Monday October 27, 2026

RUMFORD - The featured speaker on Monday, October 27, 2026, at the River Valley Rotary Club Fellowship Luncheon held at HOPE Association was Michelle Boise-Gilbody, District Governor 7780 and a member of the Freeport Rotary Club!

The luncheon was very well attended thanks to the 2026- 2027 District Governor-Elect Michelle Varuolo Cole from the Freeport Rotary Club, and former District Governor, Georg Rice and his wife Patty Rice, also a Rotarian, both from the Oxford Rotary Club, and two fellow Rotarians from the Bethel Club - Dan Murphy and Bruce Powell.

Michele Boise-Gilbody joined Rotary in 2009 and has worn many hats at both Club and District levels. She has been President of her club twice, Membership Chair, Treasurer, and Fundraising Chair, among others. She has also coordinated small and large community events. For District 7780, Michele has assisted several past District Governors in filling committee and leadership positions; she is a past and current District Trainer, and she has served several years on the District Visioning Team. Michele has also led many sessions at NE-PETS and RLI. She is currently a board member and Treasurer of BELRAG (Basic Education and Literacy Rotary Action Group).

Michele lives in Freeport with her husband of 36 years, Dave. She is a mother of two daughters and grandmother to 5, with a sixth one due soon! She had a long career in education, first as an elementary school teacher for 17 years. After receiving her MS in Educational Leadership, she was Founding Director of Cricket Hunt School for 23 years. She currently works for Wilbur's of Maine Chocolate Confections as Company Sales Coordinator for wholesale and corporate sales.

She spoke about the International President's theme, "Creating Lasting Impact!" and expounded on Polio Day, October 24, 2026, and the importance of continued support in eradicating the disease.

She brought up the importance of encouraging new members to get involved while fostering membership and being mentors to them.

AARP Fraud Watch Network

Give Robocalls the Busy Signal

Robocalls can be more than just annoying. While some automated calls are legitimate, others are used by criminals to steal money or personal information. These calls may promise prizes, demand payment for debts you don't owe or claim to come from a trusted organization.

Scammers can manipulate caller ID to make a call appear to come from a local number or a legitimate business. They may also use stolen personal information and artificial intelligence to make their calls more convincing. Even if a number looks familiar, that doesn't mean the caller can be trusted.

To protect yourself, avoid answering calls from unknown numbers. If you answer a suspicious robocall, hang up without pressing any buttons. Check with your phone provider about call-blocking options and consider adding your number to DoNotCall.gov. While this can reduce unwanted telemarketing calls, it won't stop scammers who ignore the rules.

We All Need It – STRETCH!

Yesterday, right in the middle of my workday, I received a phone call from my sister in Florida.

"What are you doing?" She asked.

"I'm doing my cats and cows," I replied.

"What?" She said, sounding a little confused.

"Yoga stretches!" I explained.

"I thought you were working!"

"I am! But my coworker inspired me to start stretching throughout the day. Her physical therapist recommended doing the Cat and Cow poses every hour to help with her back problems. So, I'm supporting her while being proactive about my own health. You know how much I sit during the day!"

My sister laughed and said, "I didn't think you needed any inspiration to do all that wacky stuff!"

Well, she does have a point! But seriously, why shouldn't we all take a few minutes throughout the day to stretch? Whether you're sitting at a desk, working on your feet, driving, cooking, or running around taking care of everyone else, your body deserves a little attention.

I told her, "It's a great idea to get away from your desk or whatever you're doing and stretch every hour. It only takes a couple of minutes, and it's good for all of us. You should try it! You don't have to do anything fancy. Just find a few gentle stretches that feel good."

Like so many women, my sister spends much of her day taking care of others. She's constantly lifting, tugging, pulling, carrying, and doing things for the people around her. Sound familiar?

We can be so busy looking after everyone else that we forget about the one person who needs our attention the most: OURSELVES!

And then came an interesting part of our conversation.

My sister began telling me about a recent trip to the emergency room. Her hips had locked up so badly that she could barely walk! The doctor gave her a cortisone shot and explained that she was extremely tight and needed to work on her mobility and stretching. He also referred her to a physical therapist.

Well, isn't that ironic?

Here I was, encouraging her to stretch, and her body had already sent her a pretty loud message that it was time to pay attention!

"How wonderful!" I told her. "To all you physical therapists out there, I LOVE YOU! And massage therapists, the same goes for you!"

Seriously, these professionals play such an important role in helping people maintain mobility, recover from physical problems, and learn how to take better care of their bodies.

Exercise, stretching, and massage therapy can all be valuable parts of a proactive approach to muscle health and mobility. We shouldn't wait until something hurts or stops working properly before we start paying attention.

Think about it. We sit too much. We stand too much. We bend, lift, twist, carry, reach, and repeat the same movements day after day. Our muscles get tight, our joints get stiff, and sometimes our bodies simply tell us they've had enough!

Why wait until we're in pain to do something about it?

I was so happy to hear that my sister would be seeing a physical therapist. I know she'll benefit from learning the right movements and stretches for her body. I also encouraged her to ask about gentle movements she could incorporate into her day, such as Cat and Cow and Child's Pose, one of my personal favorites.

You don't have to be a yoga expert, join a gym, or spend an hour exercising to start taking better care of yourself. Sometimes all it takes is getting up, moving around, taking a few deep breaths, and giving your muscles a little attention.

Here's my challenge to you: STRETCH!

Set a reminder on your phone if you have to. Get away from your computer. Step away from whatever you're doing. Give yourself five minutes every hour to move and stretch gently.

And remember, if you have pain, injury, or limited mobility, get professional guidance about which movements are right for you.

We are often so busy taking care of everyone and everything else that we forget to take care of ourselves. But our bodies carry us through every single day. Don't they deserve a little love in return?

So, let's stop putting ourselves at the bottom of the priority list. Be proactive. Keep moving. Keep stretching. Your body will thank you!

Live Long. Live Well.

Notable Thanksgiving traditions

Metro photo

Metro

Thanksgiving is a family-centric holiday that revolves around the dinner table and encourages celebrants to acknowledge all that they have to be thankful for. Thanksgiving is celebrated in October in Canada and in November in the United States.

Many Thanksgiving traditions focus on community events and sumptuous feasts, but they don't stop there. Here are some of the more notable traditions people can embrace on this day of giving thanks.

• Roasting turkey: Many foods will grace the Thanksgiving dinner table, but turkey is the star of the show. Roasting remains the most popular way to cook a turkey, but deep-fried and even rotisserie turkey have become more popular in recent years.

• Watching the parade: Millions of people tune into the broadcast of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and many more line the streets of New York City to watch it in person. The Macy's parade was first held on November 27, 1924, and was only suspended for three years during World War II. The parade features musical events, special guests and pop culture balloons that navigate streets lined with skyscrapers.

• Turkey trotting: Believe it or not, wild turkeys can run at speeds up to 25 miles per hour in short bursts, according to Lake Erie Nature & Science Center. Perhaps inspired by these speedy birds, turkey trots are popular on Thanksgiving Day. People of all ages start the holiday by running or walking in these charity events.

• Watching football: Watching professional football on television is a popular Thanksgiving custom. The Detroit Lions and the Dallas Cowboys always host an afternoon game on Thanksgiving. Each year, the National Football League also schedules a third matchup in primetime featuring other teams. In 2026, the lineup features: Chicago Bears at Detroit Lions (1:00 p.m. ET), Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys (4:00 p.m. ET) and Kansas City Chiefs at Buffalo Bills (8:20 p.m. ET).

• Early holiday decorating: Many households will decorate for Christmas immediately following the clearing of the Thanksgiving turkey from the table. Some may even decorate before guests arrive on Thanksgiving.

• Tuning into "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving": Some families watch this beloved Charlie Brown television special the night before Thanksgiving, enjoying the movie's snack menu of jelly beans, popcorn and toast.

• Celebrate "Friendsgiving": People who may not have relatives close by often gather with close friends to commemorate friendships and express their gratitude for one another.

Thanksgiving marks the first holiday during the whirlwind celebratory season. It's filled with many traditions that people across the United States and Canada enjoy.

The Great Rut Debate

Many sportsmen count the November deer hunt as the highlight of all of their outdoor passions. It is a special time. Frosty mornings and quiet moments in a tree stand with hand warmers, a thermos of hot coffee mixed with the anticipation of a big buck in the cross hairs is a deer hunter's daydream. Or, for the hardiest and most driven among the hunt fraternity, the dream is to follow a big, dew-clawed track on fresh snow.

And, of course, the Maine deer camp is also the centerpiece of the hunt, part of the heritage and the history. These camps come in all sizes and description and locales; many of them passed along from generation to generation, along with unique histories and huntin' yarns that get carried on year after year.

A mouse in the corner – a graying one that has been hiding in the food bin for more than a year or two – knows that many of the same old topics get worked over at the card tables year after year. Among them: the best deer gun, the time of day that bucks move, tracking methods, and the Daddy of them all, when is the peak period of the all-important rut?

In general, if you can figure out what time of the month the rut is at its peak, you stand the best chance of catching a buck when he is distracted with his guard down and his focus is not on danger. Since there is only educated guesswork about rut times, mixed with some well-grounded anecdotal evidence, the deer rut can be the subject of spirited debate at deer camp.

There are two clear schools of thought on this subject. The conventional wisdom of highly respected wildlife biologists like Gerry Lavigne is straightforward and has nothing to do with the moon phases. Lavigne will tell you, unequivocally, that the rut always peaks on November 15th year after year, period. This theory holds that the breeding season is guided or dependent upon the length of daylight.

The more romantic theory, if you will, is that the rut, although occurring over a period of 40 days, has a "sweet spot" that lasts about 10 days. This is the lunar theory as articulated by well-known deer researcher Charles Alsheimer from Bath, New York. In a chapter in his book titled "Anatomy of the Rut," Alsheimer postulates that the whitetail rut is regulated by the lunar cycle.

During the Hunter's Moon and the rut is when that trophy buck is distracted and not as vigilant as normal.

He theorizes that the Rutting Moon, or the Beaver Moon, determines the sweet spot, which begins three days after the Rutting Moon and lasts, as said earlier, about 10 days. Unlike the Lavigne rutting theory, this lunar theory dictates a different rut peak year after year and takes a little calculation on the hunter's part. For example, the Rutting Moon is always the second full moon after the autumnal equinox. This fall, however, the Rutting Moon, or Beaver Moon, falls on November 24th. So this would commence the rutting "sweet spot" on November 27th, much later than last year. This would also dictate that the best hunt dates would be about November 23th thru November 30th. Be advised that the firearms season ends on Saturday November 28th followed by the commencing of the black-powder season on November 30th. So smokepolers take note!

So what does this mean? It really depends upon which theory you elect to go with, lunar cycle or length of day. If you opt for the lunar theory and really want to maximize your odds for catching a rutting buck in deep distraction, you might want to reconsider the date you have set for your hunt week vacation. If Alsheimer is right, the buck of your dreams is more likely to make a mistake in your favor during the last week of the hunt.

One other thing. If you really want to "play the numbers," and cover all bases, lunar theory AND length-of-day theory, and you have a tree stand in good deer country, be in that stand every day during the aforementioned dates.

Good luck, and hunt safely!

By November, the last bit of Autumn warmth is mostly behind us. Sure, there are still a few brisk fall days for outdoor fun or the last bit of yard work, but the stacks of wood pellets in front of hardware stores and fuel trucks delivering home heating oil are a solid reminder that winter will soon be here; along with the heating bills.

Home heating oil use in Maine has declined over the last 15 years. Currently, about 50% of Maine households depend upon fuel oil as the primary source of heat, and the increasing cost of home heating oil is a major concern for many families. The Maine Department of Energy Resources' (maine.gov/energy/home) most recent survey of home heating fuel prices reported that the statewide average price for heating oil was $6.02 per gallon, representing an 81 percent increase from last fall. Homeowners can expect to pay about $740 more to fill up a standard 275-gallon oil tank than they did a year ago. These price increases will certainly impact household budgets for Mainers of all ages.

Maine Housing helped over 45,000 households stay warm last winter through the Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) or LIHEAP and the Energy Crisis Intervention Program (ECIP). HEAP helps qualified homeowners and renters pay for heating costs, and ECIP helps eligible Mainers who are at risk of losing their heating source. Both programs are administered through Maine Housing and nine local Community Action Agencies. Maine Housing's website has information about the energy conservation and heating assistance programs to help Mainers stay warm this winter. Applications are online as well at mainehousing.org.

Home heating bills are not the only utility expense that increases over the winter. Electric bills and other utility bills may cost more as well. The Maine Public Utility Commission (PUC) lists several resources to help families who are struggling to pay their bills (maine.gov/mpuc/consumer-assistance/programs). The website has practical first steps to help families contact their utility companies to discuss possible payment options or other assistance that might be available.

There is no doubt that Mainers are resourceful. We already turn the thermostat down and put on an extra sweater to save on energy bills. Before we need to reach for a third sweater, it is a good idea to make a plan for the upcoming heating bills. The Maine Housing and the PUC websites have useful resources to help us be prepared when winter arrives.

As always, please check out our upcoming events and programs and be sure to bring a friend. I hope to see you soon!

Reader Recipe

Offer something new at Thanksgiving Dinner this year:

Thanksgiving dinner offers a lot to look forward to. The unofficial kickoff to the holiday season, Thanksgiving is a chance for families and friends to get together, watch some football and, of course, share a delicious meal.

Food is a focal point on Thanksgiving. Turkey is the traditional centerpiece, but side dishes garner their share of the glory, too. Stuffing, mashed potatoes, vegetable casseroles, and more have a way of finding their ways onto the Thanksgiving menu. But hosts looking to offer something a little less traditional and more unique can look to this delicious recipe for "Stuffed Zucchini" from Lines+Angles.

Stuffed Zucchini

Makes 6 servings

- 6 medium zucchini, washed and ends trimmed
- 3 cups butter cracker crumbs, crumbled
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese, plus extra to sprinkle
- 1 small onion, peeled and minced
- 3 tablespoons minced fresh parsley, plus extra for garnish
- Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 15 ounces canned diced tomatoes, drained well

1. Preheat oven to 350 F.
2. Cut zucchini in half lengthwise; scoop pulp out with a spoon. Place zucchini shells in a large baking pan.
3. In a large bowl, combine zucchini pulp, cracker crumbs, cheese, onion, parsley, salt, pepper, and the beaten eggs. Fill zucchini shells with mixture; dot with butter and spoon tomatoes over the filling. Sprinkle with additional Parmesan cheese and bake for 30 to 35 minutes. Garnish with chopped parsley and serve.

Becoming a dark sky community

A Dark Sky Community designation lets the world know we care about keeping our stars visible and that we are working hard to achieve this. There is nothing like looking up at the sky and seeing millions of stars swirling around our Milky Way Galaxy. Sky gazing has increased in popularity and is giving a boost to tourism. More than 80% of the country lives under light polluted skies and cannot see the stars at night. Here in western Maine, we are lucky to still be able to see them. Being a Dark Sky community does not mean turning off every light. Proper lighting used when and where necessary is the key. Here's how.

Avoid those spotlights on the corner of the house or garage that light up your yard. Ever notice when you pull into the driveway and those big lights come on you need to squint to see. Like someone pointing a flashlight in your face. You are temporarily blinded by the light. Use a shield that directs the light downward where it is needed on the ground.

Use a motion sensor on your lights so they go off when no longer required. Animals have very good night vision and appreciate the darkness.

Fixtures mounted under eaves should be fully recessed, so the bulb does not drop below it. Glare is the result of seeing a bulb hanging below the light fixture. Glare inhibits visibility rather than enhances it. Well-placed lights are the key.

Use amber bulbs to curb the glare that white bulbs produce. Eliminate the high contrast of white light, and you actually see more.

While stringing festival lights all over your deck or yard looks pretty for a party, having them on every night adds a lot of light to the night sky. Use them when you're outside enjoying a gathering, but please remember to turn them off when you go inside.

Seasonal holiday lights are fun and please continue to create joy by decorating your house and yard.

Remember 5 principles of light: Useful, Targeted, Low-level, Controlled, Warm-colored.

Mercury

Q. Can you get cancer from eating fish that contains mercury?

There is no strong evidence that mercury causes cancer in humans. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (ATSDR), and the World Health Organization's International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) do not classify environmental mercury as a known or probable human carcinogen.

Primary health concerns surrounding mercury center on its neurological and kidney toxicity, rather than cancer risk.

Mercury, a liquid metal also known as quicksilver, combines with carbon to make organic mercury compounds; methylmercury is the most common one. Methylmercury is made primarily by microscopic organisms in water and soil.

Methylmercury builds up in the tissues of fish. Larger and older fish tend to have the highest levels of mercury. Research shows that most people's fish consumption does not cause health concerns.

Almost all fish—and shellfish—contain traces of mercury. However, some fish have higher levels of mercury that can harm the developing nervous system of a fetus or young child. The risks from mercury in seafood depend on the amount and type that is consumed.

The EPA and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) give the following advice to those at highest risk such as pregnant women:

• Do not eat shark, swordfish, king mackerel or tilefish. These have high levels of mercury.

• Eat shrimp, canned light tuna, salmon, pollock, and catfish. These are low in mercury.

Albacore, or white meat tuna, has more mercury than canned light tuna.

• Contact your local health department to check local advisories about the safety of fish caught in nearby waters.

(An important added note: fish sticks and fast-food fish sandwiches are usually made from seafood low in mercury.)

Mercury is a naturally occurring element that is found in air, water and soil. In addition, mercury enters the air from mining ore, burning coal and waste, and from manufacturing plants. It enters the water or soil from natural deposits, disposal of waste, and volcanic activity.

Exposure to mercury occurs from breathing contaminated air, ingesting contaminated water and food, and having dental and medical treatments.

Pure mercury has been used to make thermometers, switches, pressure gauges, fluorescent bulbs, button batteries, thermostats, dental fillings and medicines.

In recent years, there has been a growing focus on the need to decrease the use of mercury in products and to prevent mercury in existing products from entering the waste stream. Several states have passed legislation to reduce mercury in waste.

So how about those fillings in your mouth?

Dental amalgam is a silver-colored material used to restore teeth that have cavities. Dental amalgam is made of liquid mercury and a powder containing silver, tin, copper, zinc and other metals. Mercury concentration in dental amalgam is generally about 50 percent by weight.

Is dental amalgam safe?

For the vast majority of people, dental amalgam is not considered a health threat by major regulatory bodies, including the FDA and the American Dental Association (ADA).
